THE SASSY CLASSIES

Welcome to No Scene - where all art is here!

The thought behind No Scene is like reading a grant uncomfortable hug from someone you like but you're not one of those hugging people, so it's always just really awkward and you feel guilty that it's awkward.

It's cool if people find comfort in labels and identifying with certain sectors of society. In fact, it must be a huge relief to find your posse of people who you can share all your dreams and fears without ever feeling an overpowering anxiety to the point where you are just thinking about how you even fake a sickness to get out of this situation instead of just living in what's actually happening.

At No Scene we try our best to remove narrow labels and just plop out what's in our head on the pages. It could be about cats and their jobs in society or an op-ed about why Nutella is overrated. Whatever it is, we want to create a place where satirical, silly or sometimes serious ideas can grow. And maybe we like doing 1,000 piece puzzles while listening to German Goth music. That's really the ultimate goal.

Cat BFF

She passed away a month ago. My best friend. I don't mean that lightly. Not at all. You can say "cat relationships are meaningless" all day, and I'll just politely ignore you. We were each other's purpose. Every adventure, every heartbreak, every nervous new beginning, Snickers was there to bring me back down. To let me know the most important thing in the world was that we cared about each other.

Each day home, I looked forward to seeing her greet me at the door, meowing and rubbing up on the corners of the entryways. Over 13 years she made me laugh, shared in my excitement, comforted me, and always knew to gently sit next to me if I was crying. She was all of the things a person would describe in their best friend. She was ambivalent to any visitors and would make a silent statement by sitting next to me if guests were at the apartment.

The vet was always pleasantly surprised when I would bring her in for chemo or a checkup because her attitude and brightness in her face was so radiant for a cat fighting cancer and the side effects that follow. I was proud of my friend for being so brave and tough. I hoped I could be like her. When she got very sick, I would move her bed so she could be wherever I was

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS WITH TOONCES THE DRIVING CAT

FEATURED PERFORMER ON SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE

Interviewer: Toonces, let's clear the air, you were just acting on SNL, right? You can actually drive a car?

Toonces: (munching on a blade of grass) Of course. Even though I enjoyed those skits, I have gotten a lot of backlash from the cat driving community that I gave driving cats a bad name. It was all in fun. Everyone knows cats are typically very responsible drivers. Do you know how many accidents in 2019 were attributed to a cat driving?

Interviewer: I have no idea.

Toonces: ZERO! There were absolutely not accidents from a cat driving a car last year.

Interviewer: Where did your career take you after SNL?

Toonces: Eh, I got a ton of offers for commercials. BMW was after me hard. But I wanted to start a family. I have 45 children now. Some in show business, some in other successful careers. I'm proud of them all. Except Striker. God damn that boy just won't listen. Wants to live on the street. Likes living on the street, he says ... I don't get it, I don't get it. (Toonces just walks away at this point and the interview basically ends. The interviewer chased after him, but he slipped into a crevice under the porch.)

since she didn't have a lot of strength. I ensured she had extra towels and blankets to keep warm because she'd lost so much weight. At the end, she barely ate for weeks, but she would still sit next to me and purr. I would cry, she would purr. I wasn't as brave as her. I was her best friend and greatest happiness. Over toys, over food, over the fat birds sitting on the window sill, I was her favorite and she was mine. It was a friendship so incredibly pure. Humans would mess that shit up, but a girl and her cat? That's magic.

She never wanted to give up. I had to give up for her. I don't think I was wrong. I would have been selfish to keep her. I just wonder how long a heart can break. Where does that spirit of friendship go that magic, go when friends are apart? Maybe that friendship found some other girl who stumbled upon a cat at the humane society. I hope someone has it. It's just too precious to just float away.

Local-H

Pack Up the Cats (1998)

Scott Lucas of Local H brings his self-deprecating ways with him on the third Local H album after hitting it "big" with As Good As Dead in 1996. It's in every 90s alternative loving kid's CD stash, but the real question is, do cats love it?

Cat: "It's kinda loud sometimes."

The neuter

I once met a cat named Jumper
He was too much of a humper
Which was strange for a cat
What's up with that?
As a result, he was neutered which only
Made him plumper.
